THE BANK OF ENGLAND-A REMONSTRANCE.

(BY AFIFTIMES " CORRESPONDENT.) Has the Bank of England been altogether well advised, in falling in with the auggestion recently pushed forward by certain Americans, that it should hold one-fifth of its reserve in silver? Perhaps that assent was given in very guarded terms. Perhaps it was done to oblige in high quarters. Parhaps it was considered to be an act of international coursesy. There may have been this reason, and there may have been that, to excuse and extenuate. But the broad and plain truth is that, in existing circumstances, the Bank should have emphatically set its face against any such notion. It has not done so, and it ought to have done so.

There is no use in saying that this plan is stamped with the permissie of the Bank Charter Act and with the authority of Sir Robert Peel, Monetary Conference of 1881 the Bank, on the auggestion of Italy and of the United States, gave some sort of promise that, should international bimetallism be established, they might allow "the reappearance of silver bullion as an asset - in the issue department of the Bank of England. It is extremely likely that many of those who bank back to the days of the Bank Act do not study the speeches of Sir Robert Peel and the account which he gave of his reasons for the permissive clause-reasons which in present circumstances are of no spolication. It is not less Important to remember that the concession of 1881 was at once seized upon in the conference as an "important declaration," was represented as "the British nation coming and placing itself on our side," and has been a handle of annoyance against us ever since. We do not live in 1844. and we ought to learn wisdom from the experience of 1881. In these days it is as senseless for the Bank of England to keep seven or eight House of Commons to passes law for the creation of rotten boroughs. The Bank of England ought to have said this, and it has not said it,

Sir Robert Peal sat forth his views as to this question of the reserve in 1844 and also in 1848, but it was in the former year that he dealt with the question fully. He explained that the principal demand for silver at that period was for the Continent, and that as it often become profitable to liquidate obligations in that metal it was well for the Bank to hold a certain volume of silver. What did this mean? It meant in plain terms that under the action of the French bime. tallic law silver was frequently over-rated in the ratio established at the Mint, and that he. like the practical statesman that he was, meant us to be able to enjoy the opportunity afforded us by bimetallic France of paying our debts in the cheaper metal. But what has this to do with the present American suggestion? The ment in raising the price of that metal, That we should dispose of it at a profit to France or America is the very thing that under the propored scheme of " international " bimetallism we could not do. The circumstances of the two cases are thus wholly different, and where Bir Robert may have been wise we should be exceedingly foolish. For, as the only dublous point in our i financial system is the very occasional weakness of our gold reserva at the Bank, why should we deliberately choose to " water " that stock by practically reducing it by one-fifth?

The other reason that moved Sir Robert Pecl Was that a stock of silver might be convenient occasionally for shipment fa the Var Rest, Here, again, the whole circumstances are different. According to the vernacular papers, says the Kobe Chronicis, the Imperial Railway Bureau has invited tenders for the supply of five million cattles of Australian coal for the purposes of experimenting. Should the result be found satisfactory, the Bureau will in future use Australian coal. The reason which has prompted the authorities to take this step is that the advanced price of Japanese coal has resulted in a corresponding rise in the wages of miners in Japan. This has placed the workmen, says our contemporary, in such happy ciscumstances that after working a week they can afford to be idle for two or three coal is diminished and the high price of Japanese coal is maintained. The Treasury Minute which explains the contracts is as follows :-

My Lords have before them a contract dated the 25th May, 1897, between the Postmaster General and the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, for the conveyance of the East India, Austrialia and China Mails, and a contract dated the 25th May, 1897, between the Postmaster General and the Orient Steam Navigation Company, for the conveyance of the Australien Malle.

Both contrac's come into operation on the 1st Februar, 1898, and continue until the 31st January, 1905.

The contracts made with the above-mentioned Companies on the 19th January, 1888, and the 23rd January, 1898, respectively, for the conveyance of the Australian Mails terminated on the 31st January, 1895, but were renewed (with some unimportant modifications) until the grat January, 1893, by agreements dated the 31th ancary, 1801. The object of this ex'ension was to secure the termination of the contracts for the conveyante of the Australian Mails at the same date as that with the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for the conveyance of the East India and China Mails, which ran from the 1st February, 1888, to the 31st January, 1898.

question were issued on the 7th April, 1896, and were returnable on the 7th July, 1896. Tenders were lavited for all or any of the ollowing services :--

The tender forms for the contracts now in

I. A weekly service to and from Australia, or fortnightly service.

2. A weekly service to and from Bombay. 3. A weekly service in each direction between between Aden and Bombay.

4. A weekly service in each direction between Aden and Karachi. 5. A fortnightly service in each direction between Colombo and Shanghai, calling at Penang, Singapore, and Hongkong, The tenders received were as follows :-

(t.) Two complete inclusive tenders from the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for a weekly service to and from Bombay, and fortnightly services, via Colombo, to and from Shanghai and Australia, one tender naming Marsellles and the other Brindislas the European port of departure and arrival, the subildy asked being £310,000 a year for the service via Marseliles, and £330,000 a year for the scruice via Brindisi.

(2.) A tender from the Orient Steam Navigation Company for a fortnightly service to and from Australie, via Colombo, in alternation with a fernightly service of some other contractor. Subsidy £85,000 a year.

(3.) A series of tenders from the Ocean Steamship Company of Liverpool, following closely the lines of the Postmaster General's advertisement, and offering a number of alternative services between Brindisi and Bombay, Aden and Bombay, Aden and Karachi, and Colombo and Shanghal, together with extensions of these services to

(4.) A tender from the China Navigation Company for a service between Calcutta (DI mond Harbour) and Shanghai.

The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company did not tender separately for the Australian and Indian services, and it was therefore e ident that the requirements of the Post Office for the the whole of the services offered for tender could only be fully satisfied by accepting one of that Company's tenders, together with the teader of the Orient Steam Navigation

The India and China service alone might have heen provided for under the tenders of the Ocean Steamship Company, either alone or in conjunction with that of the China Navigation Company. But in that case it would have been necessary to make other arrangements for the Australian service; and there was good reason to doubt whether this would have been practic-

To the scivice offered by the Ocean Steamship Company there were also objections arising out of the character of the vessels which it was proposed to employ.

These vessels were to be small steamers of special design, not intended for the conveyance of ordinary passengers or cargo, but affording accommodation for the Mails, Mail sorters, and a few Government passengers only. They would be of about 1,100 tons burden and of pecultar and novel construction.

There are no ships affoat of precisely the type offered : but the Company proposed to build an experimental ship first.

The subsidy saked by the Company for the complete service between Brindisi, Bombay, Colombo, and Shanghal amounted to £199,000 a vear. But if this offer had been accepted a further difficulty, would have trisen in connection with the conveyance of the Parcel Mails. Under existing arrangement these are carried by the two contracting Companies direct to and from the Thames, thus avoiding the expense of ithe land journey across Europe.

If the Ocean Steamship Company's Mail Packets were required to make the voyage to and from the Thames a further subsidy of. £50,000 a year would be necessary, raising the to:al to £158,000.

If the proportion of the Peninsular and Orientil Company's subsidy, which is applicable to the Australian service, be taken at £85,000, the cost of the India and China service would amount to £145,000 for the Brindlei routs, or £225,000 for the Marsellies route. The proposals of the Ocean Steamship Company would thus involve a considerable increase of expen-

CHINESE TRADE,

A Foreign Office report from Pakin, issued on September 4th, states that the value of the foreign trade of China for the past year rose from nearly 315,000,000 Halkwan tasks in 1895 to 338,600,000 Halkwan task, which is the largest total expressed in silver value, that has yet been recorded in the returns of the Imperial Maritime Customs. In consequence of the rise in exchange which has taken place during the last two years, the average gold value of the tast having risen from 3s. 281. In 1894 to 3s. 31d. in 1895 and 3% 4d. in 1896, the increase in the sterling value of the trade during the two latter years is even more, marked, the figures having risen from £46,500,000 in 1894, to £51,500,000 in 1895, and £55,600,000 in 1896. The marked increase of trade in the-last two years is all the more satisfactory, as it affords evidence of recover, from the effects of the war with Japan, to which may be attributed the great decrease in trad: which occurred in 1894, the difference in the value of the trade between that and the preceding year amounting to over £6,000,000 sterling. The increase of over 18,000 000 Halkwan teels in the value of the trade of 1896 as compared with that of the preceding year is entirely due to the exceptional gain under imports, the figures for the year showing an increase of over 30,000,000 tacls compared with those of 1897. This increase in imports was, however, accompanied by a decrease in exports amounting to 12,000,000 tacls, which is partly accounted for by the loss of the trade of the Island of Formosa, ceded to Japan, as the returns for 1895 included six months of that traffic. The share of the British Empire in the foreign trude of China, which has increased by 9 1-3 per cent: during the year under review, now amounts to within a fraction of 70 per cent. of the whole. There has not been a similar expansion in the trade of other for sign countries, which has fallen in the aggregate by about 1 000,000 tacls. The most noticeable decrease is in the trade with Japan, which has failed by over 3,000,000 latle. The trade with the Continent of Europe, excepting Russia, has decreased by over 1,000 000 taels. On the other hand, there is a very decided improvement in the trade with the United States, which has increased by upwards of 2,500,000 tacks, and the trade with the Portuguese colony of Macao also shows an

NATURE SLOWLY MAKES READY.

You have probably never seen a velcano in cruption. It is a magnificient speciacle. Where do all those torrents of red-hot lava come from? Nobody can tell, except that they come from somewhere down deep in the earth. But one thing we know, namely, that eruptions of any one volcano are far apart. Between whiles Nature is getting ready for them; she is preparing for the tremendous demonstration. Just so it is with all her processes. In the cold of winter she is arranging the forces, which are to make the heat and the harvests of the following summer, and so on.

From May, 1890, to February, 1892, is a period of twenty one months. The two dates will long remain clear in the mind of Mrs. Martha Bowles, of 182, Liangyfelsch Road Marriston new Sames For of an experience which was bad enough in itself, yet only the introduction to something vastly worse. It was like the time of getting ready for a great trouble to come.

Her first sense of this was indefinite and vague. like the low muttering of thunder below the horison while the skies are yet clear. She expresses it thus, in the very words most of us use on similar occasions. "I felt that something was wrong with me-something hanging over me."

Ah deer ma. How often we think moh feelings are a warning sent to the spirit, when in fact they are caused entirely by the condition of our bodies. She felt heavy, languid and tired, and mentally depressed. This was not only melancholy to her but new, as she had always been strong and healthy. Then came the discomforts which there could be no mistake about. They are common enough to be sure. Oh. yes. But isn't that all the more a reason why we should understand what they mean? "Certainly,"

Well, then, there was that bad, offensive taste in the mouth, that so many of us have had; the fallure of the appetite, and the pain in the cheet and sides after cating. The worst pain was in the right side. where it was very heavy. That pointed to the liver, which is located on that side; and when anything ails the liver it is as though the big water-wheel of a mill had got fixed so as not to turn round. For the liver does half a dozen kinds of work, and when it strikes work the rest of the organs take a sort of rainy holiday.

Presently her skin and the white of her eyes turned yellow as sutumn leaves. That meant bile in the blood; the liver was off in its duty; that is a sure sign. The kidney secretion was the colour of blood instead of a clear amber, which meant that the trouble had already reached those important organs. Then the stomach was upset and refused to take kindly to food-as though the miller sent your grain back, declining to grind it. She vomited a sour, bitter fluid, which was acid bile away out of its proper track. On and on along this line, come tantly getting further and further from the happy land of health; this was the history of those twenty one months-all bad enough, yet all preparatory for WOTE OTHER

"One day in February, 1892," she says in her letter of August 18th, 1898, "I began to have dreadful pain and cramp. It began in the right side, and extended scross the stomach. For hours together I was in the greatest agony. What I suffered is past despeription. When the pain cased a little I was cold as death and shivered until the bed shook under me. I had hot from plates applied to my feet, and held hot from in my hands, but nothing gave me much relief. My stomach was so irritable that I could keep no food on it. I was now confined to my bed, and the doctor attending me said I was passing gall stones. He wanted me to go to Swanses Hospital and be operated upon, but I was afraid I might not live through "I next had two other doctors at Morriston and the trive from Dwardon, who all gave me medicines. and said nothing more could be done for ms. For six months I lay in bed undergoing the greatest sgony; never free from pain more than two or three hours at a time. During the whole of this time I was fed on nothing but milk and water. I had sourcely any life or strength left in me. All who saw me said I never could by any chance get better in this world, "I lingered on like this until August, 1892, when My husband got a bottle from Mr. Bevan, the chemist, and after taking a few doses I falt a little relief. kept on with it and soon the pains left me, my appetite returned, and my food agreed with me. After taking the Syrup for three months I was a new gross ture and strong as ever. I can now est anything. and nothing disagrees with me. After I was well our
